Social/Reform Movements	Voices of Reform (27:15) Voices of Reform recounts the reformation period that inspired American artisans during the nineteenth century. The program focuses on the romantic ideals that stressed sensation and excitement, sentiments that characterized the 1820s. Interviews with historians discuss Romanticism and Transcendentalism, the Temperance Movement, Feminist Movement, and Abolitionist Movement, Frederick Douglass, Sojourner Truth, and John Quincy Adams. Examining the life and works of William Lloyd Garrison, pioneer abolitionist, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton's Declaration of Sentiments, written during the Seneca Falls Convention of 1848, this engaging presentation outlines the incredible accomplishments made during an era of strong social reform. Born into slavery on a Maryland plantation, Tubman was caught trying to escape and savagely beaten. Twenty years later, she escaped successfully to the free North, where she began her career as a conductor on the Underground Railroad, guiding more than 300 blacks to freedom. During the Civil War, Tubman assisted the Union army as a nurse, a spy and by leading a series of devastating raids on Confederate positions. After the war ended, she built a home for old and impoverished blacks in her adopted hometown of Auburn, New York. Whether people believed the idea was too liberal or not liberal enough, the program describes the resistance Abraham Lincoln faced from slave owners and abolitionists in presenting the Emancipation Proclamation and securing adept leadership for the army of the Potomac. As the program notes, changing hands from George McClellan to Ambrose Burnside to Joe Hooker allowed the South to continually win battles under the leadership of Robert E. Lee. A segment on Jefferson Davis's draft laws, which resulted in racial and class divisions that caused riots and even more unrest in the nation, and an examination of the shift in women's roles on the home front and in society shares the social impact of this monumental era in United States history. This program documents the turning-point battles of Vicksburg, Gettysburg, and Chattanooga, and also examines encounters at Cemetery Ridge, the siege of Port Hudson, the Battle of Cold Harbor, Missionary Ridge, the Battle of Chickamauga, and William T. Sherman's Atlanta Campaign and March to the Sea. The program spotlights the strategies and personalities of important Civil War leaders, including Ulysses S. Grant, Robert E. Lee, William Rosencrans, Abraham Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, Pierre Beauregard, and Joseph Hooker. Discussing the impact of military campaigns on political life in the North, slavery and emancipation in the South, and general civilian life in both regions, the informational presentation references military tactics against the political backdrop of the 1860s. 	"The Pivotal Year" reveals how Lincoln faced up to the difficult decisions that confronted his presidency during the most crucial year of the Civil War. In calling for the abolition of slavery, Lincoln changed forever how America would define the meaning of the Phrase "all men are created equal." (56 min.) I Want to Finish this Job, 1864. With Ulysses S. Grant now in charge of the Union armies, the bloodiest fighting of the war was underway, and the death toll continued to rise. Lincoln's call for more soldiers made the president unpopular, and his enemies hatched plans for his defeat. Behind the scenes, we get an intimate view of how Lincoln coped with the pain of so many casualties. While he was sorely testes by the cruel conflicts of war, his compassion never flagged. Above all, he wanted to finish the job of preserving the Union. (56 min.) Now He Belongs to the Ages While the Union army moved closer to final victory, Lincoln's pleas for conciliation could not be heard in all quarters. As the war drew to a close, the President was secretly marked for assassination. In the chilling conclusion of "Lincoln", we see how his enemies plotted their final revenge. The fanatical mania of assassin John Wilkes Booth mirrored the collective rage of those who thought the President had dishonored their heritage and traditions. The last days and hours of Lincoln's life are touchingly captured in "Now he belongs to the ages." (56 min.)

Both Northerners and Southerners refused to accept them as equals, and in many cases looked the other way while their rights were regularly abused on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line. This program presents a grim picture of the black experience after slavery as seen through the eyes of those who experienced it firsthand and of their families. Topics include the shortcomings of Reconstruction, the establishment of the Ku Klux Klan, the failure of the post-war land-distribution act, the deliberately cultivated image of black males as criminals and rapists, and the perpetuation of the Jim Crow laws well into the 1950s. Original BBC broadcast title: Sold Down the River. (51 minutes) Reconstruction and Segregation (1865-1910) - With the tragic assassination of Lincoln, a complete Congressional Reconstruction and the Reconstruction Amendments, the United States had entered the political modern era. Establishment of the Freedman's Bureau and a ruling Republican party, however, coincided with grimmer realities such as the rise of the Ku Klux Klan, a racial caste system, black segregation, sharecropping, Jim Crow laws and the misguided notion that white and black Americans could be "separate but equal." .VHS. Native American	The People To the original Native American inhabitants, the West has been a loan of myth. To the European settlers, the West was a "wilderness" to be conquered. Nearly 100 years before the American Revolution, the Pueblo people of the Southwest rose up against their European masters and drove the Spanish from their lands. Then, with America's purchase of the Louisiana Territory in 1804, Lewis and Clark set off to find the fabled Northwest Passage, as a confident young nation prepared for its own epic march across the West. After fighting to stem the tide, the futility of N. DVD-R $89.95 war against the United States caused the Lakotas to soon accept peace. As the intruders continued their extermination of the buffalo—the chief source of food for the nomadic Lakotas—they rose again in 1876 under Chief Sitting Bull, winning a stunning but short-lived victory over Colonel George Custer at Little Bighorn. Forcibly resettled on the small Pine Ridge reservation, the Lakotas attempted a final revolt in 1890, which ended tragically in the massacre at Wounded Knee Creek. In the 1860's America was a divided nation. The Civil War tore the country's spirit apart and mountains, desert and wild rivers divided the country geographically. At a time when the nation desperately needed a symbol of unity, Congress authorized the building of a railroad that would make the country one. The Union Pacific built from the East. The Central Pacific built from the West. It was one of the most extraordinary engineering events the country had ever seen. Construction crews built across hundreds of miles of desert, pushed into mountains as high as 8,000 feet and crossed one river alone 31 times. The Iron Road recounts the six years of harsh labor, searing heat, Indian attacks, and frontier lawlessness that railroad men endured in their quest to build America's first transcontinental railroad. 60 min on 1 VHS	3 DVD Set DVD 625.1 AME VT 385.0973 IRO Safari Montage http://econtent.bu.cksiu.org/SAFARI/montage/login.php?fromlogoutlink=true&login

The spotlight shined on the growth, glamour and grief of New York during America's giddy postwar "Gilded Age." Exploring the incomparable wealth of the robber barons and the unabashed corruption of political leaders, such as Tammany Hall boss William M. Tweed, the episode examines the era when the expansion of wealth and poverty -- and the schism between them -- built to a crescendo. The program ends as the city itself dramatically expands its boundaries, annexing Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and Staten Island into a single massive metropolis -- Greater New York. Narrated by David Ogden Stiers. Features commentary and interviews with historians, politicians, scholars, architects, writers and more. Directed by Ric Burns. Many of the reforms of the 1930s as well as those of more recent times, found their origins in the progressive decades around the turn of the century. By showing the similarities between current efforts to effect change and those of the past, and by discussing reform techniques—how certain techniques are tried and succeed, while others fail—Progressive, Populists, and Reform in America (1890-1917) will help make the era relevant to students' experience. Much of the success of this document can be attributed to the way the Constitution has changed to meet the needs of the American people. The framers of the Constitution wisely anticipated the need to make changes to the Constitution as the world itself changed. Between 1787, when the Constitution was written, and the present time, thousands of proposed amendments have been introduced in Congress. But in that time, only 27 of those proposed amendments have been ratified. These 27 amendments tell some of the most important stories in American political, social, and cultural history. They tell the story of the founding principles of the American nation, and how that nation has changed. This comprehensive series explores each amendment, its origins, its real-world applications, its history of interpretation in the nation's courts, and its implications for the future. Combining computer graphics, original live-action video, historical artwork, and archival footage with narration and interviews, each program reveals an important chapter in the ongoing history of the U.S. Constitution. Diverse voices and faces will help expand students' knowledge and understanding of the time period and how it relates to our lives today. The program also explores key themes such as the impact of technology, the rise of racism, immigration and the search for a national identity, and the rise of America as a world power Brave New Age This program uses archival film footage to chronicle America's rush into the "modern age" of the early 20th century. In 1903, President Teddy Roosevelt sends U.S. gunboats to assist the Panamanians in gaining independence from Colombia -- and U.S. control of the Isthmus of Panama. Roosevelt also helps settle the Russo-Japanese War. Henry Ford introduces his Model T -- one of several machines and manufacturing processes to revolutionize the way of life for many Americans; Carrie Nation crusades for prohibition; San Francisco is shaken by a massive earthquake. People displaced by the 'quake move to Southern California, a migration pattern that includes farmers moving to cities for factory jobs, and waves of immigrants from eastern and southern Europe. Labor unrest becomes a characteristic pattern. Vibrant media support for American History units on the major issues and events of the first decades of the 20th century, including geographic and technological influences on economic, social and cultural developments in society, as well as U.S. foreign policy and its consequences in domestic, political, and cultural arenas. McKinley, George Dewey, Rough Riders. Roosevelt	Warrior to Priest: Presidents of the Early 1900s (27:15) above This video series profiles three American presidents of the early twentieth century--Theodore Roosevelt, William Howard Taft, and Woodrow Wilson--detailing their foreign and domestic policies and key ELECTIONS in between. Beginning with the assassination of President McKinley in 1901, the program tracks the rise of Theodore Roosevelt, from his changing relationship with trusts and monopolies to his firm devotion to conservation and environmental issues. The program also discusses key figures and events, including J. P. Morgan, Gifford Pinchot, John Muir, Senator Robert La Follette, the Sierra Club, the Food & Drug Administration, the Panic of 1907, the origins of the Federal Reserve System. The program then examines the progressive reform and racial attitudes that defined the presidency of Woodrow Wilson. The Panama Canal, Colombia, and U.S. presence in Latin America is compared with America's growing anti-imperialism attitude. Grade(s) : 9-12 © 1999 Classroom Media This video contains 9 segments World War I and Its Aftermath (54:00) What were the events that led to this conflict, and how did the world change as a result? Four segments explain the political setting, strategies, and realities of "The War to End All Wars." Rise of Nationalism — Traces the growth of nationalism in the early 1900s by focusing on oppression in Czarist Russia. World War I — Explores the causes of "The Great War" and what life was like for a soldier fighting in the trenches. Death from Above: The Red Baron — Documents scientists' use of forensic evidence and detective work to determine who shot down the German flying ace. Communism and the Soviet Union — Explores the fall of czarist Russia toward the end of WWI, and the birth of Communism. Archival images and modern-day research form a compelling account of how soldiers, citizens, and nations fared during the War and its aftermath. Produced by Discovery Channel School. This ABC News program anchored by Peter Jennings documents the course of the war that blighted a generation-- and the punitive peace that ensured future enmity. From prewar arms race between Germany and Britain to the Stalemate on the Western Front, Germany's last grab for victory, America's knock-out blow, and the treaty of Versailles, the program offers an overview of a catastrophic chapter of 20th century history. An ABC News program with Peter Jennings produced in 1999. Understand how alliances were formed and see how quickly hostilities escalated. Examine the initial stance of the United States and its peace-loving president and discover what finally convinced America to join forces with the European Allies. Woodrow Wilson's determination to form an international organization to mediate international disputes is discussed. Consider how Germany's humiliation at the end of the Great War laid the foundation for another worldwide conflict. Films for the Humanities, 2002. DVD (42 min) The Road to War (27:15) The Road to war examines the factors and influences behind world war I, beginning with the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand by Gavrilo Princip and the complex system of alliances among Germany, England, Serbia, and Russia. Through expert interviews and archival footage, the program focuses on the U.S. perspective on European nationalism, including Woodrow Wilson's resistance to American involvement in the war and pleas for neutrality at home. After investigating the roles of the Lusitania and Zimmerman Telegram in Congress's decision to declare war, a feature on the war Industries Board and new technology imparts the revolutionary changes the war had on African Americans and immigrants. Special emphasis on the Progressive Era and such political forces as anarchism and socialism considers a revisionist perspective on the social impact of the war on the homefront. Angered at the sinking of the Lusitania, Americans continue shipping war materials to the beleaguered Allies. President Wilson stalls, but Theodore Roosevelt and entertainers such as Charlie Chaplin whip up American interest in fighting. In April, 1917, President Wilson signs a declaration of war against Germany. American troops arrive in France that June; they will train and wait for reinforcements, not seeing action until June, 1918. By war's end, some two million U.S. soldiers will participate. African American soldiers, segregated even in wartime, greatly distinguish themselves in battle. Women join the labor force; the assembly line concept is greatly expanded; new technology sends military aircraft, machine guns, ships, and tanks rolling off the lines. The excitement of "the Great War" sobers into grim reality, and molds the U.S. into a world power. Compelling media support for American History units on WWI, its impact on foreign and domestic policies, as well as social, economic and cultural changes, and contributions of significant individuals such as John J. Western Art : Remington, Russell	The Wild Riders "If they are human, they're a separate species," said Charley Russell about cowboys. This episode shows us the West of Frederic Remington and Charley Russell, whose works transformed the working cowboy into the most enduring hero-figure in American folklore. Russell became a living representative of the West he portrayed, the poet laureate of the passing frontier. In their very different ways, he and Remington created a gallery of heroes that live on in the American imagination. (57 minutes)	DVD 978 FRE
Post Civil War Art : Whistler, Eakins, Bellow	Whistler's Mother "Controversial" is probably not the first word to come to mind when viewing Whistler's Mother, and yet as a harbinger of modernity and even abstraction in art, it was. To fully tell the story of the painting Whistler called Arrangement in Gray and Black No. 1: Portrait of the Artist's Mother, this program provides a broad view of the artist and his times. Topics include Whistler's unconventional artistic vision; the influence of Charles Gleyre, Manet, Courbet, and Hokusai on his work; his bohemian lifestyle in France and England; his painting technique; and Whistler's Mother's entry into pop culture.
